My name is Nuno Carriço, I'm a digital designer with over a decade of experience in the sector, collaborating with a number of industries from various sectors. My current work focus is the intersection between user interface design and brand identity.

I am multidisciplinary and specialised in branding, web and interface design. I seek to develop functional and objective solutions, and since 2011 I have been working for institutions and companies. In addition to commercial work I develop my creativity with personal projects.

I am passionate about art, technology, sports and I feed my creativity through reading, discovering new places or exploring new technologies.

Currently I live in Évora - Portugal but I can work remotely with clients from all over the world.
